DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

(e) the invention was described in —

(1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effect under this subsection of a national application published under section 122(b) only if the international application designating the United States was published under Article 21(2)(a) of such treaty in the English language; or

(2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that a patent shall not be deemed filed in the United States for the purposes of this subsection based on the filing of an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a);

Claims 1-4, 8 and 9 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Snowdon et al. ("Snowdon"). Per claim 1, Snowdon discloses a plug connector comprising: a first plug contact 12; a second plug contact 24; a conductive connecting member 6 formed as a spring positioned between the first and second plug contacts and forming an electrical contact between an inner surface of the first plug contact and an outer surface of the second plug contact; and a receiving element 8 housing the conductive connecting member between the first and second plug contacts.

Per claims 2, 4, the connecting member is a flat spiral spring in certain sections.

Per claim 3, the connecting member further comprises flat spiral spring regions and straight regions located one after the other (see attachment).

Per claim 8, the connecting member is annular and the receiving element comprises at least one transverse groove (see figures 5, 6, 13) into which the connecting member is inserted.

Per claim 9, the connecting member is fastened to the receiving element at the straight regions.

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 5-7, 10, and 11 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

Regarding claim 5, the prior art does not suggest the connector as claimed, including the combination of all the claimed elements, the combination including the helical groove as claimed.

Regarding claim 10, the prior art does not suggest the connector as claimed, including the combination of all the claimed elements, the combination including that the receiving element is a plastic injection moulded part to which the receiving element is fastened.

Regarding claim 11, the prior art does not suggest the as claimed, including the combination of all the claimed elements, the combination including that the receiving element further comprises a latching element having a latching projection which is engageable with a recess located in one of the first and second plug contacts.

Claims 12-22 are allowable. The prior art does not suggest the arrangement as claimed, including the combination of all the claimed elements, the combination including the cylindrical conductive surfaces as claimed, the spring, and the receiving element as claimed where the contacts bias the connecting member as claimed.
